

Located in the commune of Saint-Laurent-des-Combe, the Château de Candale is classified as a Saint-Émilion Grand Cru. It would have originated from a certain Lady Marguerite de Suffolk Kandall, descendant of the English king Edward III who married Count Jean de Foix, allowing him to become Count of Candale. Since 2010, the estate has been the property of Jean-Louis Vicard who has enlisted the services of Stéphane Derenoncourt's teams to write a new page in the legend of this château.

94/100 Tasted in 2017

Nose with lovely fresh fruit. Elegant, fruity palate, nice length, saline touch. A nice wine. Overall, 2016 was an exceptional year in this region.
